Jacquelyn E. Winston, Ph.D.

What role does cultural context and social location play in the formation of global Christianities? How have the unique histories of Asians, Latin Americans, and Africans influenced their understandings of the essential message of Christ’s sacrificial death and resurrection and its implications for life in community? In this course, students will examine the historical events, cultural views, and influences from indigenous religions and western imperialism upon the formation of unique national configurations of Christianity.
